The name Four Peaks is a reference to the four distinct peaks of a north-south ridge forming the massif's summit. The northernmost peak is named Brown's Peak and is the tallest of the four at 7,659 feet, making it the highest peak in Maricopa County. The view from Brown's summit is certainly one to remember.

"Oso" = "Bear". The Four Peaks wilderness contains the largest concentration of black bears in Arizona, and along the trail we found a pile of fresh evidence of what "bears do in the woods". But Smokey was not spotted. My guess is that our rough demeanor scared the "crap" out of him, and he headed for Utah.
